

Education

Computer education is something that we as individuals are responsible to do for ourselves. It is not the responsibility of anyone else to teach us anything about the use of our own computers. What I am saying is, if you have friends who are very knowledgeable about computers... you may be risking your friendships or offending your friends by your constant questions about your personal computer. It is one issue to learn and grow. However, it is completely another issue to expect someone else just to do it for you because they possess the knowledge!

Your friends are there for your friendship not to be a teacher about computers. If they offer to help or assist you in your quest that is fine. Just do not expect them to be your personal instructor or computer technician service.

If you wish to learn about a certain item, go to any search engine like, Google or Yahoo and look up the information that you require or ask your questions to online computer forums designed specifically to help computer users in general. You will gain great satisfaction of knowing how and where to find items over the Internet and become more proficient as you practice your online Internet skills.

I have provided a 'Yahoo Search Box' at the top of my pages for your convenience. Real friends are hard to come by and if they possess computer knowledge and are willing to share it with you, then you are a blessed person!
